Handwritten text in Devanagari script, likely a manuscript fragment. The text is arranged in approximately 12 horizontal lines across the length of the palm leaf. The script is dense and characteristic of traditional Indian manuscript writing. There are two circular holes visible on the left side of the leaf, used for binding multiple leaves together.

Handwritten text in Devanagari script, likely a manuscript from the Jangamwadi Math Collection. The text is densely packed and covers the entire length of the palm leaf. It appears to be a religious or philosophical treatise, possibly related to Jainism, given the context of the collection. The script is a traditional form of Devanagari, and the leaf shows signs of age and wear, including a large hole on the left side and smaller holes along the top edge.

Handwritten text in Devanagari script on a palm leaf manuscript. The text is arranged in approximately 15 horizontal lines. The leaf shows signs of age, including two circular holes and irregular damage along the left edge. The script is a traditional form of Devanagari used in historical Indian manuscripts.
